USFWS and IUCN status

The red wolf is listed as endangered under the U. S. Endangered Species Act (ESA) (United States Public Law No. 93-205; United States Code Title 16 Section 1531 et seq.). Wild red wolves inhabiting the northeastern North Carolina (NENC), USA recovery area and a single island propagation site (St. Vincent NWR, Florida) are designated as experimental non-essential populations under Section 10(j) of the ESA. The IUCN Red List of Threatened Species lists the red wolf's status as critically endangered.

Current ex situ population status

The data reported in this studbook are current through 27 January 2014. As of that date, the historical red wolf studbook consists of 868,907.53 (1828) animals and the living ex situ population of 79,113.0 (192) at 45 institutions. Red wolf population management events (births, transfers, and deaths) recorded since the last studbook publication from 4 January 2013 are reported on pages 21 – 27.

The most recent population analysis used to generate annual breeding and transfer recommendations took place at the Homosassa Springs Wildlife State Park, Florida in July 2013. Demographic and genetic summaries (Table 1) created from that planning meeting and an updated population census (Fig. 1) are included below.

Current status of population in the wild

An estimated 100 – 120 red wolves currently inhabit more than 6000 km² encompassing the five-county red wolf recovery area located in NENC. At the end of 2013, 62 known red wolves (i.e. monitored via functioning radio-collars occupied the recovery area. The population includes 11 packs totaling 36 wolves with 9 breeding pairs and 8 mixed packs comprising 8 wolves and 8 sterile coyotes. An additional 18 wolves are not known to be associated with a pack. Additional wolves are likely present but have not been captured/radio collared or their presence otherwise confirmed. These individuals are not included in the living by location section and are recorded as lost-to-follow up (LTF) in the historical section until their presence is confirmed. The NENC population is also supported by an island propagation site located at St. Vincent Island National Wildlife Refuge, Florida, USA through a strategy of providing wild-born wolves trans-located for release at NENC.

Taxonomic status

The USFWS retains distinct species status for the red wolf. Recent taxonomic designations that have been proposed include assigning the red wolf as a subspecies of gray wolf, C. lupus rufus, or combining the red wolf with eastern gray wolf, C. l. lycaon. A review of red wolf taxonomy is included in Chambers et al. (2012) account of North American wolf taxonomy published in North American Fauna <http://www.fwspubs.org/toc/nafa/77>.

Data conventions

Scope	This studbook report includes an alphabetical listing of red wolves living by location as of 27 January 2014 and an historical listing by studbook number.
Stud #	A listing of all animals entering the program and assigned a permanent studbook number
Sex	F = Female (f - sterile) M = Male (m - sterile) ? = Unknown
Date	All dates listed as DD/MM/YY. “~” indicates estimated day, month, or year
Sire/Dam	By studbook number if known <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • WILD if wild born. Wild-born individuals from parents of the contemporary reintroduced/free-ranging populations with an assigned studbook number, are entered as such in the SPARKS database. • UNK if parental identity is unknown.
Locations	Listed by ISIS mnemonic
Local ID	Identification number reported by the holding institution
Event	Management activities in an animal’s lifetime. Individuals in the historical section with the first Event listed as Capture denote an estimated birth year based on historical records
UDF	User defined field (historical section) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Y = animal determined a hybrid • N = animal not hybrid • U = undetermined unless confirmed

Institutions that have contributed data to the current studbook publication are marked with * in the location glossary beginning on page 140. Those institutions that are not identified by an asterisk, no longer maintain red wolves.
