

Alligator River

National Wildlife Refuge

Yours to enjoy...

Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge encompasses a broad expanse (152,000 acres) of mysterious wildlands and waters. Visitors are welcome to explore this unique upland swamp refuge. Designated wildlife drive and trails offer the best wildlife viewing opportunities. Black bear, deer, river otters, and red wolves, along with a variety of birds, reptiles, and amphibians may be seen. During the winter months, large numbers of waterfowl and other migratory birds are present. Wildlife viewing is best from a safe distance. If you plan to venture into areas not designated as roads or trails on this map, please inform a responsible person of your plans. Be aware that poison ivy, ticks, insect pests, poisonous snakes (cotton-mouths, copperheads, and timber rattlers), and other natural nuisances and hazards may be encountered. This is your National Wildlife Refuge. Please enjoy your refuge experience, but handle with care.

Tips for Wildlife Viewing

Wildlife are usually most active at dawn and dusk.

Walk or drive slowly and quietly; stop frequently to watch and listen.

Be friendly to other visitors; often they will share information!

Bring binoculars or spotting scopes and field guides.

Bring insect repellent and a non-alcoholic drink.

You Can Help
